Improving Quality: Conversations Developing Critical Thinking Skills in Young Children

This session explores how intentional adult–child interactions promote critical thinking in young children. Participants will examine how skilled teachers deepen learning through:

- Purposeful language
- Observation
- Well-timed, open-ended questions.

These interactions help educators better understand children's interests and developmental needs, spark curiosity, and encourage children to explore, problem-solve, reason, and co-construct their understanding of the world around them.
